Ine Intelligencer.

The Banks and Their Taxes. contest has been in progress for some months past between the County Assessor for the city district and some of the banks, his own stuff but also that of such other the Bridge Company, and two or three private parties, and large property should be levied upon them. The contesting banks claimed that under the U S. laws exempting United States securities from State or local taxation, they had a right at any time to put any portion of their means into such securities, and thus relieve themselves from taxation as to that portion of their capital. In pursuance of this claim it was the habit of some of them to thus invest more or less of their means just prior to return day (the lst day of February) and to reconvert said means as soon thereafter as they saw fit into any other shape deemed desirable. Under this claim and this process abank would return only a small proportion of its capital, say one-tenth, more or less. Assessor Arkle held that this claim of the banks was not good in law, and refused to recognize it as coming within the proper scope of exemption for United States securities, and therefore proceeded to return such an amount of property for each of them as, from his best information, he could trace to their possession. To his return the banks of ourse demurred, and went before the Board of Commissioners asking for a correction of his assessment. The Finance Committee of the Board took the ergies. He goes in for everything that is matter up for consideration, and employed counsel to assist in examining its merits, the banks, on their part, also employing counsel. After many sessions of committee and a full and patient hearing of all that could be said on both sides, the committee came to the conclusion that the Assessor's construction of the law and of his duties was correct, and in this conclusion they were sustained by the Board after a hearing of their report. The conclusions reached by the committee and ratified by the Board are given in another part of our paper, where they will no doubt be read with unusual interest by the public. As to what the banks will further do by way of testing their claims remains to be seen. It has been intimated that they into the courts. But this is hardly prob able. It is more likely, we judge, that they will accept the decision of the Board as final, as respects the law of the case, whatever exceptions they may still take to the precise amounts respectively assessed against them.

An Enterprising Trader.

county, is one of the most enterprising business men in West Virginia. There are few men in the State who single handed and alone employ so many people or carry on such a variety of business interests. He has at this time six stores in full blast-viz : two in Marshall, three in Wetzell, and one in Greene county, Pa He has also a saw mill, planing mill and grist mill, a farm of 2,000 acres, and does a growing business as a commission merchant in Baltimore. He has the contract for building the Marshall county iail, which is now under roof, is put mont, and is also putting up three school houses in the Bellton region.

All this looks as if Mr. White had too many irons in the fire, and as if some of them, in accordance with the old proverb, might get burned, but a variety of employment is not an experiment with him, and he has given proof that he is well adapted for the sphere of activity in which he is engaged.

Yorktown in Marshall county, at Littleton, Knob Fork and Silver Hill in Wetzel, and at Freeport in Greene county. A glance at the map will show that these points all radiate like so many spokes in a wheel from his central headquarters at Bellton. For instance, Littleton is eight miles east on the B. & O. road, Yorktown nice miles south. Silver Hill nice miles

Freeport 11 miles north. To all these places roads lead from Bellton, and they are on streams that are skirted by pro ductive agricultural regions. At each of them Mr. White has an agent, mostly men whom at one time or another he has had in his employ at Bellton, and who understand their business. They are each furnished with 'three to four thousand dollars worth of goods, consisting of the usual variety of merchandise found in a country store, and these goods they exchange for all sorts of agricultural pro ducts, such as grain, cattle, hogs, poultry and lumber. To supply them with goods and also to bring to Bellton whatever they take in he keeps eight teams constantly on the move. Nearly all these arents are Postmasters, and their stores are therefore points to which the coun try people come for their mail matter as well as for their supplies, and to which they bring whatever they have to trade for merchandise. At such points as Yorktown, Knob Fork and Silver Hill he has a number of men employed shaving hoops out of the lumber he trades for and these hoops together with barrel and keg stuff, and also grain and other produce he hauls to Bellton, and there ships to Baltimore to his commission depot in that city. So considerable have been Mr than the Commission merchants, and thus save not only their 5 per cent charge but likewise the "leakages." Acting up on this experience he soon thereafter established a house of his own in Baltimore, and put one of his men in charge of it, and found that "there was millions in it" in a small way. He not only sells al parties as consign to him, and as a rule the Commission merchants. saws it up at his mill, but he also works more or less of it into cheap furniture which he sells through the country or ships East according as prices warrant He also grinds a good deal of wheat at his mill, including buckwheat, and also corn and disposes of the offal along with the flour and meal wherever he can find the best market. In this way he becomes sort of universal supply merchant, manufacturer, trader and farmer, and is prepared to buy and sell almost anything that is raised or wanted by the people with whom he trades. In this way, also, he concentrates a large business at Bellton, portion of which used to be huckstered off through Greene county to the Charto Pittsburgh. He also gives employment sixty at times, and enables many farmers to put stuff into market not always salable at the railroad depots.

We speak thus at length of Mr. White because he is a live man—one of the sort of men that are needed in a backward country to develop its resources and enprogressive, and is, as he deserves to be, an influential and popular citizen of Mar-shall county. He has been twice chosen to represent Marshall county in the Legislature, and to him the INTELLIGENCE and its readers were often indebted for interesting letters giving us news of whi was going on at Charles

The difficult nature of the extensive investigation made by the Board in regard to the general conduct of the service is indicated in the following statement:

The regulations prescribed by the President for the management of the Indian affairs, and the directions from the Secretary of the Interior, seem to have been absolutely necessary to a full compliance with the law, but no regulations or directions under the statutes have been found by this Board for the control either of the bureau officiale or the subordinates in the Indian service here or elsewhere. The instructions regulations and other orders promulgated by the Commissioner over his signature have had limited effect, in not having been rigidly enforced or fully respected.
